THE LAST OF THE SEASON.

GEORGIA'S BETTER MATERIAL DOES THE WORK.

A Defeat at Football, But a Victory For Auburn Grit.

THE SCORE: 12 TO 6.

On Thanksgiving Day, before the largest crowd that ever witnessed a football game in Atlanta, our team, though fighting manfully to the very end, succumbed to the weight and strength of the team which represented the University of Georgia, by a score of 12 to 6. Never has there been seen on any gridiron a better game than the immense crowd saw that day.

It was a game full of fierce, hard tackles, hard bucks and good kicking. Every inch of ground was contested. Never a man of the twenty-seven men who fought so manfully that day ever ceased to put forth his greatest effort until the referee's whistle had blown the fourth Auburn-Georgia game into history.

There were no long runs. The two longest were one by Cothran, when he made the second touch-down for Georgia, and Pearce's twenty-yard run just before Auburn secured her only one.

I have nothing but words of commendation for the Georgia team. With the exception of Lovejoy they played a very clean game. But Lovejoy—his work was the dirtiest ever seen on a Southern football field. He is a good player, but his brutalities detract so much from his work that it would be best for the game in the South if he and all like him (I don't believe he has an equal for dirty play in the South) should be debarred from the game. It is not my idea here to make any criticism on legitimate rough play. I do not, nor do I mean to. I believe in football, and to play the game as it should be played it is rough and no game for babies. But there is a roughness in which Mr. Lovejoy delights—such as kicking a man with heels, and jumping upon him after he is downed with his knees,—which makes him very unpopular at the University (I am reliably informed such is the case), and also with men of the teams he plays against.

For Captain Nally and the rest of the Georgia team we wish to speak of them as clean, hard and fearless football men. They, one and all, worked hard, and the victory they have won is truly a great one. We wish them to know that they have the best wishes of the Auburn team, for they have proven to us that they are true sportsmen, and, more than this—gentlemen.

In regard to my own team, what can I say? Words fail me. I cannot begin to express the admiration and love we all feel for you. Words cannot tell how grandly you fought. It was a game of which we are proud and of which you should never cease to talk. It was a victory for Auburn grit and Auburn pluck. It has demonstrated to the world that no matter what the odds are against you, you can and will battle to the last.

There was never a moment in the game when a single one of Auburn's heroes would have acknowledged themselves defeated. They had come to Atlanta for victory, and victory they played to have, with that daring dash and fearless determination which characterizes the disregard for life or limb. It was simply marvellous the way our little backs (small in comparison with Georgia's) plunged into Georgia's line of giants.

Had it not been for the power the men had to strike the line together, and the magnificent help they gave each other on bucks, we could not have done anything against the superior weight and strength of Georgia. It was the grandest up-hill fight a team ever put up. With the score 12 to 0 against them, our boys played even harder and harder as the game progressed. With almost superhuman effort, our gallant half-back, Williams, plunged into the line time after time. Then Pearce was entrusted with the precious pig-skin to carry it twenty yards and deposit it the same distance for Georgia's line.

Then came the chance to score. Williams was sent between left guard and center for ten well-earned yards. Again he was called upon to go between left guard and tackle, to be downed three yards from a touch-down. Again he was called upon to strike the same spot. And strike he did. It was a case of gain or die trying and he flung himself at Georgia's line—there was a shock, a quiver, and a black head emerged from the mass of forms for a moment, and then was lost to view. But with that precious burden pressed close to his breast, Williams was lying across Georgia's goal line, and Auburn had scored.

Too much cannot be said of Williams' grand playing. He proved himself to be the best half who ever wore a canvass jacket in the South. His work was grand, and we shall always love him for doing so nobly that day.

Among the many fine exhibitions of football seen on that day, I wish to call attention to the great defensive work done by the boys just before the first touch-down of Georgia's. Georgia had brought the ball up the field by good bucks until it rested one yard from our goal and first down. Here our boys put up a most gallant defense. Once Nalley was hurled at our left tackle, to be downed with less than half a yard. Again he came, to gain only a few inches. With ball six inches from a touch-down and third down, the ball was given to one of the backs (I don't remember who); there was a mass of arms, legs and bodies, and when the pile was pulled apart, the ball was over. Such defense as our boys put up cannot go unnoticed. It was true football.

To the members of the team whose names have not appeared in this article, I wish to say, you, one and all, played grand, GRAND, GRAND ball. You have left a record behind you which will be pointed to by every Captain who shall come hereafter. He will refer to the whole team of '96 and say, "Play as did the team of '96 and if victory does not come to you, you have nothing to be ashamed of; for when a man puts forth his greatest effort and fails, he has done his best, and no more can or will ever be asked of any man."

The Knoxville Summer Conference.

In this day of conventions Christian students are alert to the good to be derived from these gatherings, and attend to receive training in methods of Christian work.

In 1886 the first Student Summer School was held at Mount Hermon, Mass., at the invitation of Mr. Moody, and has rightly been called the most important convention of students ever held. As a result of the benefits derived from this conference (which was afterwards held annually at Northfield, Mass.), there have been established three other Summer Schools, to-wit: One at Lake Geneva, Wis., in 1890; one at Knoxville, Tenn., in 1892, and another at Valperazo, Cal., last June.

There might have been seen at Knoxville, Tenn., on June 19th, 1896, 159 students from 50 Colleges of the South gathering for the purpose of spending ten days in prayer, Bible study and conference. Only those who have been so blessed with the privilege of attending one of these gatherings can, to any satisfactory degree, estimate its value to the Christian life and work of those present.

Our College Association was represented last June at Knoxville by J. L. Pollard, J. W. King, W. H. McBryde and W. J. Beeson.

We can best understand the character of the work by viewing the work of a day. About five o'clock in the morning you might see a number of the most zealous Christian workers sitting upon the beautiful velvet-clad campus, with Bibles in their laps, keeping the "morning watch" with God alone. Having just spoken to Jesus and fed upon His word, those humble followers felt prepared by 6 o'clock to talk with their fellowmen while feeding their bodies at the well-furnished table. At 7:30 a. m. the Missionary Institute was held, where the Missionary committeemen and volunteers were trained in the latest and best methods of missionary study and work in Colleges. At 8:30 the two Bible classes met; the one for training leaders in personal work, and the other for training leaders in devotional Bible study. The College Conference, where were discussed all problems of College Association work, was held at 9:30. At 10:45 we had the pleasure of hearing some of the best and most impressive speakers of this country and England. Among them were Dr. J. H. Brooke, of St. Louis; Dr. S. A. Steel, of Nashville; Dr. R. J. McBryde, of Lexington; Dr. J. R. Sampey, of Louisville; Mr. Robt. E. Speer, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Chas. T. Studd, B. A., Cambridge University, '83. These are rare, soul-stirring, life-broadening speakers.

The afternoons were given to sports, such as baseball, basket ball, tennis, rowing, swimming.

At seven o'clock life-work meetings were held on the hillside. These were perhaps the most impressive of the day. Then followed the second platform meeting. The delegates lived in an air of spirituality.

Our Coach.

When the six o'clock train pulled away from Auburn Saturday, November 28th, it carried away Mr. J. W. Heisman, our beloved coach.

"He was a man—take for him all in all;

I shall not look upon his like again."

He is the best coach that ever set foot upon Southern soil. He has labored conscientiously for the success of the team for two years, and whatever success may have come to Auburn in that length of time is due entirely to him. When he first came into our midst in September, '95, he was unknown to every man in College. Yet before he had been here a week he had gained the love, admiration and confidence of every member of the Faculty as well as the boys.

He was at all times a perfect gentleman.

When the season of '95 was a thing of the past and other Colleges were searching for coaches for the next season, we had but one aim and that was to secure Heisman. With him we knew our season would be a success, and it was.

When he returned to Auburn at the opening of College there were no less than thirty-five scrub and 'varsity men of the previous season who did not return or were forbidden to play. What was he to do? How could we turn out a winning team? It looked hopeless to the students and Faculty alike. But "Heis." did not lose hope. He threw himself into his work even harder (if possible) than ever before. He created team work out of raw material, and just the best team from a team work standpoint that we have ever had.

The Red and Black speaks of the game Thanksgiving as being a victory for Warner and that he proved himself a better fox than Heisman.

In reply to this I wish to say that if Heisman had had the Georgia team to work into shape and Warner Auburn's, the score would have been thirty or forty to nothing in favor of Heisman.

Warner made the best team in the South of Georgia's material, but Heisman can take the same material and do three times as well as Warner did. The fact is, that as long as J. W. Heisman wishes to sign an Auburn contract he may do it. We have been greatly pleased with his work for two years, and hope that he will be with us again next year.

Not since the writer has been in College has a man ever been given such an enthusiastic departure. In spite of the cold, chilling rain which was falling and the unexpectedness of his departure, over a hundred Cadets were down to wish him god-speed and a safe return to us next year. Most of the fellows had tears in their eyes as they grasped his hand and bade him a fond good-bye. And as the train pulled away we gave three cheers and a tiger for our true friend and coach, J. W. Heisman, the best coach the South has ever had.

Captain Tichenor.

Our plucky little Captain of '96 has by this season's work proven himself to be a jewel. Although weighing only one hundred and twenty-eight pounds, an equal at generalship and quarterback can not be found in the South. His superior generalship was made manifest in the Georgia game, in which Auburn played such a plucky "up-hill" game. In this game the men seemed to be imbued with the snap and determination so characteristic of Captain Tichenor.

It is due to his conscientious work and untiring efforts that Auburn was so ably represented on the gridiron.

He will not be with us next year; but the best wishes of our entire College will always attend him.

EDITORIALS.

A SPLENDID plaster-of-Paris bust of Senator Morrill, of Vermont, now adorns an alcove at the right entrance to the Library. Senator Morrill, as we know, is the founder of the State A. & M. Colleges, each State having one similar to Auburn, and was the pioneer in securing for each State a certain portion of its lands belonging to the Government for the maintenance of its College. Hence we are doubly indebted to Senator Morrill and to the United States for our existence. It was upon the motion of Dr. Broun, at a late meeting of the Association of A. & M. Colleges of America, that each College possess one of these busts as a token of the high esteem and veneration in which Senator Morrill is held. Though nearly eighty years of age, Senator Morrill is still hale and hearty, and is a Senator from Vermont of about thirty years' standing. Long may he live to encourage those principles of education which he has so long advocated.

THE resignation of Mr. L. S. Boyd from his position as Assistant Librarian has caused much regret among the Faculty and College at large. Mr. Boyd was a most efficient Librarian—always courteous and obliging—and we were sorry to see him leave us. He graduated in '92 and immediately accepted the position of Private Secretary to the President. He was appointed to the position he has just resigned in the fall of '95. He goes now to study law in the office of Judge Kernan, one of the most prominent lawyers of Louisiana. En route to Clinton, his place of study, he will stop over for several days in New Orleans and Baton Rouge. At the latter place his uncle, Mr. Thos. D. Boyd, is President. The ORANGE AND BLUE wishes Mr. Boyd the best of success in his new vocation, and we are sure that he will reflect credit upon his Alma Mater.

Military.

By recent promotions and appointments the battalion is completely officered and presents a fine appearance. The following is the list of officers and non-commissioned officers according to rank:

ECCLESIASTICAL ROME.

An Always Present Power That Gives the City Its Importance.

"Ecclesiastic" Rome is the stronghold of a most tremendous fact from whatever point of view Christianity may be considered. If one could in imagination detach the head of the Catholic church from the church, one would be obliged to admit that no single living man possesses the far-reaching and lasting power which in each succeeding papal reign belongs to the pope. Behind the pope stands the fact which confers, maintains and extends that power from century to century—a power which is one of the highest elements of the world's moral activity, both in its own direct action and in the counteraction and antagonism which it calls forth continually.

It is the all pervading presence of this greatest fact, literally, in Christendom which has carried on Rome's importance from the days of the Cæsars across the chasm of the dark ages to the days of modern popes, and it is this really enormous importance which continually throws forward into cruel relief the puerilities and inanities of the daily outward world. It is the consciousness of that importance which makes old Roman society what it is, with its virtues, its vices, its prejudices and its strange, old fashioned, close fistled kindliness, which makes the contrast between the saturnalia of Shrove Tuesday night and the cross signed with ashes upon the forehead of Ash Wednesday morning, between the careless laughter of the Roman beauty in carnival and the tragic earnestness of the same lovely face when the great lady kneels in Lent before the confessional to receive upon her bent head the light touch of the penitentiary's wand, taking her turn perhaps with a score of women of the people. ### HER BARN STORMING TOUR.

Mary Anderson de Navarro Recounts an Incident of Her Early Stage Career.

Mary Anderson de Navarro looks back with evident enjoyment upon what she calls the "barnstorming" period of her stage career, which, however, in her case was short, beneficial and pecuniarily profitable. Her experiences in Owensboro, a small Kentucky town, where she and her little band of actors played for a week, Mrs. de Navarro writes in The Ladies' Home Journal:

"I was a tall, slender Juliet and my Romeo proved to be a plump, pleasant little woman, probably the mother of several would be Romeos and Juliets. The moon she (Romeo) swore by we found to be the headlight of a railway engine hired for the occasion. This was held by a small negro boy perched upon a ladder, who was so amused by the play that he laughed until he shook over the most tragic scenes. His mirth, as may be imagined, was not conducive to the moon's steadiness. At one time she was shining in an upper box, at another on the head of a bald musician, often blinding the unfortunates in the front stalls, here, there, everywhere save on the face of her ('Verona's lovely flower') she had been especially hired to illuminate. The conductor of the orchestra was a carpenter by trade, and sawed away as lustily during the day at the boards he was converting into profile statues of 'Evadne's' noble ancestors as he sawed upon his violin at night."

ODDS 'AND' ENDS.

In 1868 gas was first employed as a fuel.

Americans use more than 90,000,000 pounds of tea a year, nearly all of which comes from China.

The flea is provided with a lancet and a cutting apparatus which looks almost exactly like a miniature razor. These instruments are carefully tucked away in his proboscis and used for bloodletting purposes.

A high board fence is built around the site of all that is left of the Talmage tabernacle, at Greene and Clinton avenues, Brooklyn. Inside the fence is a mass of broken brick and stone and twisted iron braces.

The expenses of the Vatican are very heavy, one authority estimating them at $5,000 a day, but when the immense number of cardinals, chamberlains, servants and others connected with papal institutions are considered it does not seem excessive.

A statistician says he has observed that musicians have, as a rule, excellent heads of hair. In the prime of life the musician's hair flourishes most, and in every 100 music devotees only one hairless head is met with, while in other professions about 11 in every 100 are bald.

THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION.

General Harrison Explains How It Was Made by the People.

Ex-President Harrison's paper in The Ladies' Home Journal of "This Country of Ours" series treats comprehensively of the constitution and its application and operation, defining the instrument, its scope and limitations clearly. "The word 'constitution,'" he writes, "as used among us implies a written instrument, but in England it is used to describe a governmental system or organization made up of charters—as the Magna Charta—the general acts of parliament and a body of long established legal usages or customs. These are not compiled in any single instrument as with us, but are to be sought in many places.

"The common American usage in making a state constitution is to elect by a popular vote delegates to a convention, whose duty it is to prepare a plan of government. When the delegates have agreed and have properly certified the instrument, it is submitted to a direct vote of the people, and each voter casts a ballot 'For the constitution' or 'Against the constitution.' If a majority vote for the constitution, it then becomes the paramount law of the state. The legislature does not make the constitution; the constitution makes the legislature. The American idea is that constitutions proceed from the people in the exercise of their natural right of self government and can only be amended or superseded by the people. Whatever one legislature or congress enacts the next one may repeal, but neither can repeal or infringe a constitutional provision.

"The delegates to the convention that framed the constitution of the United States were not, however, chosen by a popular vote in the states, but by the legislatures. Nor was the question of the adoption of the constitution submitted in the states to a direct popular vote. *** There have been 15 amendments to the constitution adopted. Ten of these were proposed to the legislatures of the states by the First congress and ratified. The other five amendments have in like manner been submitted by congress to the state legislatures for ratification, conventions in the states not having been used in any case. It will be noticed also that the vote upon the adoption of the constitution and upon amendments thereto is by states, each state, without regard to its population, having one vote. But while these provisions make the popular control less direct than is usual in the states and necessarily recognize the states in the process of making and amending the constitution, the idea that constitutions proceed from the people is not lost."

A MESSAGE FROM THE GALE.

Listening on the Ice Floe to the Roar of the Coming Storm.

When the swell is heavy in the ice pack, it is often very difficult to ascertain from which direction it comes, and just as difficult as it is, just so important may it be that it should be found out rightly, as the safety of the ship might wholly depend upon correct judgment as to this. When the huge ice masses begin to move and screw and press on the sides of the vessel, rising and falling in a heavy swell, then there is only one escape—namely, to work the vessel into the fields away from the side from which the gale blows. A mistake as to the direction of the running swell has often proved fatal, and the mistake is easily made.

An old arctic sealer told me how in hours of dread in the arctic icepack he had laid his ear down to the ice floe and listened to the roar of the coming swell—that terrible message from the furious gale—and how he thus had discovered whence the gale was pressing

EDITORIALS.

A SPLENDID plaster-of-Paris bust of Senator Morrill, of Vermont, now adorns an alcove at the right entrance to the Library. Senator Morrill, as we know, is the founder of the State A. & M. Colleges, each State having one similar to Auburn, and was the pioneer in securing for each State a certain portion of its lands belonging to the Government for the maintenance of its College. Hence we are doubly indebted to Senator Morrill and to the United States for our existence. It was upon the motion of Dr. Broun, at a late meeting of the Association of A. & M. Colleges of America, that each College possess one of these busts as a token of the high esteem and veneration in which Senator Morrill is held. Though nearly eighty years of age, Senator Morrill is still hale and hearty, and is a Senator from Vermont of about thirty years' standing. Long may he live to encourage those principles of education which he has so long advocated.

The resignation of Mr. L. S. Boyd from his position as Assistant Librarian has caused much regret among the Faculty and College at large. Mr. Boyd was a most efficient Librarian — always courteous and obliging — and we were sorry to see him leave us. He graduated in '92 and immediately accepted the position of Private Secretary to the President. He was appointed to the position he has just resigned in the fall of '95. He goes now to study law in the office of Judge Kernan, one of the most prominent lawyers of Louisiana. En route to Clinton, his place of study, he will stop over for several days in New Orleans and Baton Rouge. At the latter place his uncle, Mr. Thos. D. Boyd, is President. The ORANGE AND BLUE wishes Mr. Boyd the best of success in his new vocation, and we are sure that he will reflect credit upon his Alma Mater.

ECCLESIASTICAL ROME.

An Always Present Power That Gives the City Its Importance.

"Ecclesiastic" Rome is the stronghold of a most tremendous fact from whatever point of view Christianity may be considered. If one could in imagination detach the head of the Catholic church from the church, one would be obliged to admit that no single living man possesses the far-reaching and lasting power which in each succeeding papal reign belongs to the pope. Behind the pope stands the fact which confers, maintains and extends that power from century to century—a power which is one of the highest elements of the world's moral activity, both in its own direct action and in the counteraction and antagonism which it calls forth continually.

It is the all pervading presence of this greatest fact, literally, in Christendom which has carried on Rome's importance from the days of the Caesars across the chasm of the dark ages to the days of modern popes, and it is this really enormous importance which continually throws forward into cruel relief the puerilities and inanities of the daily outward world. It is the consciousness of that importance which makes old Roman society what it is, with its virtues, its vices, its prejudices and its strange, old fashioned, close fistled kindness, which makes the contrast between the saturnalia of Shrove Tuesday night and the cross signed with ashes upon the forehead of Ash Wednesday morning, between the careless laughter of the Roman beauty in carnival and the tragic earnestness of the same lovely face when the great lady kneels in Lent before the confessional to receive upon her bent head the light touch of the penitentiary's wand, taking her turn perhaps with a score of women of the people. It is the knowledge of an always present power, active throughout the whole world, which throws deep, straight shadows, as it were, through the Roman character, just as in certain ancient families there is a secret that makes grave the lives of those who know it.—Marion Crawford in Century.

HER BARN STORMING TOUR.

Mary Anderson de Navarro Recounts an Incident of Her Early Stage Career.

Mary Anderson de Navarro looks back with evident enjoyment upon what she calls the "barnstorming" period of her stage career, which, however, in her case was short, beneficial and pecuniarily profitable. In her experiences in Owensboro, a small Kentucky town, where she and her little band of actors played for a week, Mrs. de Navarro writes in The Ladies' Home Journal:

"I was a tall, slender Juliet and my Romeo proved to be a plump, pleasant little woman, probably the mother of several would be Romeos and Juliets. The moon she (Romeo) swore by we found to be the headlight of a railway engine hired for the occasion. This was held by a small negro boy perched upon a ladder, who was so amused by the play that he laughed until he shook over the most tragic scenes. His mirth, as may be imagined, was not conducive to the moon's steadiness. At one time she was shining in an upper box, at another on the head of a bald musician, often blinding the unfortunates in the front stalls, here, there, everywhere save on the face of her ('Verona's lovely flower') she had been especially hired to illuminate. The conductor of the orchestra was a carpenter by trade, and sawed away as lustily during the day at the boards he was converting into profile statues of 'Evadne's' noble ancestors as he sawed upon his violin at night."

The following requisites are exacted from each member: "Every camp will be required to exact of each applicant for membership in its ranks satisfactory proof of honorable service of some ancestor in the army or navy of the Confederate States, and honorable discharge or release therefrom."

The crack company selected to attend the inaugural ceremonies was officered by the following Cadets:

Captain, J. B. Hobdy. 1st Lieut., W. H. McBryde. 1st Lieut., W. H. Negus. 1st Lieut., G. M. Holley (Adj.)

The faculty, and especially the Commandant, feel that the College was well represented by the splendid appearance and excellent conduct of the Cadets. The company consisted almost entirely of Senior classmen, many of the commissioned officers voluntarily acting as privates. In spite of the inclemency of the weather, the boys enjoyed themselves immensely.

The company was highly complimented by the Regimental and Battalion officers of the State Troops, and in testimony of their appreciation of the company's military appearance and ability it was placed at the head of the column of companies.

A camp of Sons of Confederate Veterans was organized in the Masonic Hall on Saturday night, November 7th, 53 names being enrolled. The following officers were elected:

Commander, Dr. P. H. Mell; First Lieut. Commander, Prof. C. C. Thach; Second Lieut. Commander, Mr. L. S. Boyd; Third Lieut. Commander, Mr. J. M. Thomas; Adjutant, Prof. A. F. McKissick; Quarter Master, Mr. Warren H. McBryde; Surgeon, Dr. J. H. Drake, Jr.; Chaplain, Dr. J. W. Rush; Officer of Day, Mr. B. S. Patrick; Treasurer, Mr. C. L. Hare; Sergeant Major, Mr. John Buford Hobdy; Color Bearer, Mr. Chas. Johnson Nelson.

The following committees were appointed:

Committee on By-laws and Constitution, Dr. P. H. Mell, Mr. R. J. Trammell, Jr., Mr. W. J. Beeson.

The camp was named in honor of Major John Pelham, the noted artilleryman who fell at Kelly's Ford while leading his men. Major Pelham was from Calhoun County, Alabama, and was one of the most gallant soldiers of the war, and bears the unshared honor of a compliment from Gen. Robt. E. Lee in a general order, whence his proud and honorable title "The Gallant Pelham."

Historical Committee, Dr. C. H. Ross, Prof. C. C. Thach, Mr. L. S. Boyd.

Committee on Membership, Mr. G. W. Duncan, Mr. W. C. Jackson, Mr. H. S. Houghton.

Building Committee, Prof. A. F. McKissick, Mr. W. J. Beeson, Mr. R. J. Trammell, Jr.

The following requisites are exacted from each member: "Every camp will be required to exact of each applicant for membership in its ranks satisfactory proof of honorable service of some ancestor in the army or navy of the Confederate States, and honorable discharge or release therefrom."

The crack company selected to attend the inaugural ceremonies was officered by the following Cadets:

Captain, J. B. Hobdy. 1st Lieut., W. H. McBryde. 1st Lieut., W. H. Negus.

1st Lieut., G. M. Holley (Adj.). The faculty, and especially the Commandant, feel that the College was well represented by the splendid appearance and excellent conduct of the Cadets. The company consisted almost entirely of Senior classmen, many of the commissioned officers voluntarily acting as privates. In spite of the inclemency of the weather, the boys enjoyed themselves immensely.

The company was highly complimented by the Regimental and Battalion officers of the State Troops, and in testimony of their appreciation of the company's military appearance and ability it was placed at the head of the column of companies.

If you have a bad cold or sore throat, try some of Dr. Bragaw's remedies.

On the Bridge.

"Geel!"

A howl of anguish arose from the man with the pale pink whiskers.

"I've an awful stitch in my side!"

The Brooklynite beside him held fast to the hand rail.

"That comes from"—he helped the sufferer through the surging throng as he spoke—"getting hemmed in a crowd."

The other said nothing, and in silence they threaded their way through the devious mazes of the new bridge terminal.

—New York World.

On "Change."

Bragley—Hello, old fellow! I've struck it rich. I never had such luck. Everything I handle rises ten points—everything I touch turns to gold.

Nagly—I say, Bragley, touch me, will you?—Truth.

A Boy's Suggestion.

"Little boy," said a man severely, "I wouldn't act that way."

"Why?"

"Because it's wrong to fight, and"

"Yes, but wot did yer do at my age?"

"Do? I obeyed my parents, brought smiles to the faces and joy to the hearts of my playmates"

"Never got too sick t' go t' Sunday school?"

"Never."

"Never smoked grapevines in"

"Never, never, my poor boy"

"Never licked a kid littler'n you?"

"No, sir."

"Ner stole a peach ner melon ner"

"Never, boy, never!"

"Never lied t' git 'nuther kid whupped, when 'twuz your turn?"

"Nay, verily"

"Soy!"

"Well?"

"How'd ye spend yer time?"

"In study, in reflection, in application, in solemn meditation"

"Say, mister, you oughter run fer office"

"Ah, true and wisely said, my dear little boy. You evince wisdom beyond your years and environments. We have need of good men in office"

"Yes; ye oughter run"

"Ah, my dear little"

"So'st th' fellers on th' other side could tell ye wot ye are. 'Twouldn't be perlite in me!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TURF TOPICS.

About eight mares in a thousand on an average breed twins.

The well known turfman and driver, Budd Doble, has taken a residence in New York city.

Colonel J. Ruppert, Jr., has secured second call on Jockey Simms' services for next season.

Statistics carefully compiled show that 7,362 races were run during the past season on the regular tracks.

John Green, who owned the world's champion trotting stallion, Directum, 2:05 1/4, died recently in Dublin, Cal.

Orrin Hickok has turned Hulda out for the winter and hopes to take her up in the spring in fine condition for serious work.

In 1895 on 34 race courses there was a total of $3,326,479 hung up in stakes and purses for the 54,938 starters to pull down.

The dams of Falkland, 2:13 3/4; Hour, 2:17; Juanita, 2:29; Nellie McGregor, 2:14, and Montrose, 2:18, are all in foal to Arion, 2:07 3/4.

In Goodwin's Official Guide there are 218 horses whose names are duplicates, and as this does not cover racing at the outlaw tracks there are probably other cases.

During the past year New York's five tracks for runners gave the horse owners $711,302 for 707 races, making the average value of the events a trifle over $1,000.

ADVERTISING.

It Is One of the Most Ancient of All the Civilized Arts.

It is generally believed, by the simple and unlearned, that the art of advertising is of comparatively modern invention, but a very slight study of the subject will be sufficient to convince the inquirer that it is, in point of fact, one of the most ancient of all the civilized arts. Indeed, the first advertisement was probably coeval with the first man who had something to dispose of or with the first woman who wanted something she had not got. It seems not impossible that the serpent tempted Eve to partake of the apple by means of a "puff paragraph," setting forth the merits of the fruit as a complexion beautifier. Be that as it may, the uses of advertisement were known at a very early date to the Israelites, who were accustomed to placard the streets of their cities with the utterances of kings and prophets.

The ancient Greeks, too, were much given to advertisement, chiefly through the medium of the town crier, who, however, was not permitted to offend the ears of the citizens with his proclamations unless he were accompanied by a musician to give him the correct pitch. The fact that property had been stolen or damaged was made known by means of curses, inscribed upon sheets of lead, which were affixed to the statues of infernal deities in the temple, the vengeance of the gods being thus invoked upon the persons who had stolen or injured the advertiser's goods. A rider was usually added, to the effect that should the property be returned, or recompense be paid, the owner would intercede with the gods for a remission of the punishment.

The Romans also made use of the town crier to proclaim laws, victories, or sales, and the walls of the streets were covered with notices painted in black or red, or inscribed upon terra cotta slabs, and let into the pillars on either side of houses and shops. Many of these wall advertisements were found in Herculaneum and Pompeii, among the most interesting being the announcements of the gladiatorial games, containing promises that shelter would be provided in case of rain and that the sand would be watered should the weather be exceptionally warm.—Cornhill Magazine.

WANTED TOO MUCH.

The Latter Part of a Complex Scheme Fails to Work Successfully.

Said a wholesale whisky merchant: "We have the reputation of giving more for charity than any other class of men. While we get credit for some things we do, yet there are many calls made upon us that are never recorded. I remember a case not long ago. A former prosperous citizen came into our establishment. He took out his handkerchief and wiped the tears that came into his eyes. In a broken hearted manner he said that his wife was dying, and that the doctor had prescribed whisky, but that he did not have any money. When he told such a tale of woe, I said:

"My friend, if your wife is really sick, I will give you the whisky."

"He swore he was telling the truth, and I put the whisky in a bottle on which was our brand. He left, the happiest looking man in the world. I was feeling good also and was flattering myself into thinking I might be another good Samaritan, when presently my friend reappeared. This time his tears were rolling down and his frame was shaking with convulsive sobs. I went over to him and asked, 'Is your wife dead?'

"Oh, no!" he replied, 'but I am afraid she will die, as just as I was at my front gate I slipped on the steps and dropped the bottle, which broke into a thousand pieces. I picked up the pieces and have brought them back for you to see, and to beg that you will give me another bottle.'

"I was touched and turned to get him another bottle, when to my surprise I got a glance at a piece of the glass. I said, 'Excuse me, my friend, but the bottle I gave you was white glass and that one is green.' I then examined the pieces and found that it was not the bottle nor our brand. The liquid on the glass was water. As I looked at my friend he picked up the pieces, turned red, mumbled an excuse and sneaked off."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Rather Cruel.

I know of a young man who has his walls covered with the portraits of pretty girls and women—some 600 of them. A few are acquaintances, but the majority of the photographs are of actresses and singers.

His fiancée said to a friend of mine the other day:

"Do you know, I feel quite jealous and heavy hearted when I go into that room of George's. I wonder what he can see in me, after looking at all those lovely girls for hours at a time?"

"Oh," said my friend, "some men don't care for beauty in their wives."

And then, as the awful silence arrived on time, she felt like sinking through the floor, though her utterance had been

On the Bridge.

"Gee!"
A howl of anguish arose from the man with the pale pink whiskers.
"I've an awful stitch in my side!"
The Brooklynite beside him held fast to the hand rail.
"That comes from"—he helped the sufferer through the surging throng as he spoke—"getting hemmed in a crowd."
The other said nothing, and in silence they threaded their way through the devious mazes of the new bridge terminal.

A Boy's Suggestion.

"Little boy," said a man severely, "I wouldn't act that way."
"Why?"
"Because it's wrong to fight, and"—
"Yes, but wot did yer do at my age?"
"Do? I obeyed my parents, brought smiles to the faces and joy to the hearts of my playmates"—
"Never got too sick t' go t' Sunday school?"
"Never."
"Never smoked grapevines in"—
"Never, never, my poor boy"—
"Never licked a kid littler'n you?"
"No, sir."
"Ner stole a peach ner melon ner"—
"Never, boy, never!"
"Never lied t' git 'nuther kid whupped, when 'twuz your turn?"
"Nay, verily!"
"Say!"
"Well?"
"How'd ye spend yer time?"
"In study, in reflection, in application, in solemn meditation"—
"Say, mister, you oughter run fer office!"
"Ah, true and wisely said, my dear little boy. You evince wisdom beyond your years and environments. We have need of good men in office!"
"Yes; ye oughter run!"
"Ah, my dear little!"
"So'st th' fellers on th' other side could tell ye wot ye are. 'Twouldn't be perlite in me!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TURF TOPICS.

About eight mares in a thousand on an average breed twins.

The well known turfman and driver, Budd Doble, has taken a residence in New York city.

Colonel J. Ruppert, Jr., has secured second call on Jockey Simms' services for next season.

Statistics carefully compiled show that 7,362 races were run during the past season on the regular tracks.

John Green, who owned the world's champion trotting stallion, Directum, 2:05 1/4, died recently in Dublin, Cal.

Orrin Hickok has turned Hulda out for the winter and hopes to take her up in the spring in fine condition for serious work.

In 1895 on 34 race courses there was a total of $2,826,479 hung up in stakes and purses for the 54,938 starters to pull down.

The dams of Falkland, 2:13 3/4; Hourie, 2:17; Juanita, 2:29; Nellie McGregor, 2:14, and Montrose, 2:18, are all in foal to Arion, 2:07 3/4.

In Goodwin's Official Guide there are 218 horses whose names are duplicates, and as this does not cover racing at the outlaw tracks there are probably other cases.

During the past year New York's five tracks for runners gave the horse owners $711,302 for 707 races, making the average value of the events a trifle over $1,000.

ADVERTISING.

It Is One of the Most Ancient of All the Civilized Arts.

It is generally believed, by the simple and unlearned, that the art of advertising is of comparatively modern invention, but a very slight study of the subject will be sufficient to convince the inquirer that it is, in point of fact, one of the most ancient of all the civilized arts. Indeed, the first advertisement was probably coeval with the first man who had something to dispose of or with the first woman who wanted something she had not got. It seems not impossible that the serpent tempted Eve to partake of the apple by means of a "puff paragraph," setting forth the merits of the fruit as a complexion beautifier. Be that as it may, the uses of advertisement were known at a very early date to the Israelites, who were accustomed to placard the streets of their cities with the utterances of kings and prophets.

The ancient Greeks, too, were much given to advertisement, chiefly through the medium of the town crier, who, however, was not permitted to offend the ears of the citizens with his proclamations unless he were accompanied by a musician to give him the correct pitch. The fact that property had been stolen or damaged was made known by means of curses, inscribed upon sheets of lead, which were affixed to the statues of infernal deities in the temple, the vengeance of the gods being thus invoked upon the persons who had stolen or injured the advertiser's goods. A rider was usually added, to the effect that should the property be returned, or recompense be paid, the owner would intercede with the gods for a remission of the punishment.

The Romans also made use of the town crier to proclaim laws, victories, or sales, and the walls of the streets were covered with notices painted in black or red, or inscribed upon terra cotta slabs, and let into the pillars on either side of houses and shops. Many of these wall advertisements were found in Herculaneum and Pompeii, among the most interesting being the announcements of the gladiatorial games, containing promises that shelter would be provided in case of rain and that the sand would be watered should the weather be exceptionally warm.—Cornhill Magazine.

WANTED TOO MUCH.

The Latter Part of a Complex Scheme Falls to Work Successfully.

Said a wholesale whisky merchant: "We have the reputation of giving more for charity than any other class of men. While we get credit for some things we do, yet there are many calls made upon us that are never recorded. I remember a case not long ago. A former prosperous citizen came into our establishment. He took out his handkerchief and wiped the tears that came into his eyes. In a broken hearted manner he said that his wife was dying, and that the doctor had prescribed whisky, but that he did not have any money. When he told such a tale of woe, I said: "My friend, if your wife is really sick, I will give you the whisky."
"He swore he was telling the truth, and I put the whisky in a bottle on which was our brand. He left, the happiest looking man in the world. I was feeling good also and was flattering myself into thinking I might be another good Samaritan, when presently my friend reappeared. This time his tears were rolling down and his frame was shaking with convulsive sobs. I went over to him and asked, 'Is your wife dead?'
" 'Oh, no!' he replied, 'but I am afraid she will die, as just as I was at my front gate I slipped on the steps and dropped the bottle, which broke into a thousand pieces. I picked up the pieces and have brought them back for you to see, and to beg that you will give me another bottle.'
"I was touched and turned to get him another bottle, when to my surprise I got a glance at a piece of the glass. I said, 'Excuse me, my friend, but the bottle I gave you was white glass and that one is green.' I then examined the pieces and found that it was not the bottle nor our brand. The liquid on the glass was water. As I looked at my friend he picked up the pieces, turned red, mumbled an excuse and sneaked off."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Rather Cruel.

I know of a young man who has his walls covered with the portraits of pretty girls and women—some 600 of them. A few are acquaintances, but the majority of the photographs are of actresses and singers.

His fiancée said to a friend of mine the other day:
"Do you know, I feel quite jealous and heavy hearted when I go into that room of George's. I wonder what he can see in me, after looking at all those lovely girls for hours at a time?"
"Oh," said my friend, "some men don't care for beauty in their wives."
And then, as the awful silence arrived on time, she felt like sinking through the floor, though her utterance had been
